For high school diploma

Carmel trustees adopt study-at-home program

CARMEL STUDENTS who can't or won't attend regular classes still can earn a diploma under an at-home independent study policy approved by the district board of trustees last week.

The policy, which complies with a new state education law, gives students the chance to design their own programs and work at home toward graduation.

According to Carmel High School counselor Louise Tanous, the independent study program should draw a diverse group of students.

"It can run the gamut from kids who want out of school to students who want to take the (diploma equivalency) examination and go on to Monterey Peninsula College," she said.

Under state law, any high school student 16 or older can take the standardized test in lieu of completing the graduation requirements. If he passes, he receives a certificate from the state equivalent to a high school diploma.

The program also will serve students who have discipline and attendance problems, or who need independent study because of physical, emotional or educational handicaps, according to the policy.

"This doesn't close the door to returning to school"

STUDENTS MUST agree to a contract with the district to participate in independent study. They must meet with their parents or guardians, a school counselor or teacher, and the high school principal to develop the contract. All the participants sign the agreement.

It will specify what the student's objectives are; how many credits he will receive for his work; a statement of what work he will do and how long he will spend on it daily; the names of anyone besides school district personnel who will assist the student; and a plan for reporting back to the district on his progress with the program.

Mrs. Tanous said the work will be monitored once a week.

Independent study is permitted both on and off campus, she said. Classes can be required courses or electives and can be self-taught.

Mrs. Tanous said students who might opt for the program are those who already are involved in a career yet who want to maintain some contact with school.

She also cited one high school student who can't attend classes because she must stay at home and care for her parents, both of whom are ill. For her, Mrs. Tanous said, independent study is the only alternative to dropping out entirely.

"This doesn't close the door to returning to school," she said.

•

THE DISTRICT will not provide textbooks for students, she said, because it doesn't have books aimed at home study programs. The school will receive money as attendance credit for the students, provided it verifies that the students are spending a minimum number of hours daily on independent study.

The policy will take effect as soon as the first parent conferences are complete, Mrs. Tanous said. She could not estimate how many students might choose independent study.

Angry county superivisor denounces newspaper account of Marriott vote

MONTEREY COUNTY Supervisor Michal Moore accused the editors of the Monterey Peninsula Herald on Tuesday of deliberately distorting news coverage of the Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge hearing a week ago.

"In their zeal to attach themselves to an already emotional problem, they misled the public," Moore charged at the opening of the board meeting earlier this week. "I consider it to be an irresponsible act, reprehensible behavior."

The supervisors agreed last week on a 3-2 vote that a hotel project, in general, would be consistent with the Carmel Valley Master Plan for the 271-acre Rancho Canada Golf Course at the mouth of the Valley. By virtue of the vote, Marriott developers can apply for a use permit.

Moore sided with Supervisors Edwin Norris and Kenneth Blohm in that vote. Supervisors Sam Farr and Dusan Petrovic opposed the action.

At the same time, Moore declared that the 376-room Marriott project proposed by Winthrop Carmel Inc. is inconsistent with area land use. He said he would vote against the project if it came before the supervisors from the planning commission.

SWING VOTE on a crucial land use issue, Supervisor Michal Moore assailed coverage of his action last week by the Monterey daily newspaper. In an unusual public statement, he claimed the account was distorted.

His declaration virtually assured defeat for the hotel project since Farr and Petrovic are adamant in their opposition.

MOORE CLAIMED the Herald story ignored his statement opposing the hotel project and played up the consistency vote as a victory for the developers.

"There was deliberate obfuscation of the vote of this board and the issue decided," he said, referring to the newspaper account. "The question I saw decided was and continues to be consistency, not the use permit application, not the environmental effects (of the hotel), but consistency of the master plans."

Moore said the consistency of hotel construction in general with the master plan is different from consistency of a specific proposal.

"They deliberately ignored that fact and deliberately obscured the issue in order to provide some issue to take off on their editorial page," he said.

Moore was criticized by the newspaper in an editorial Friday. He was said to have a "Hamlet-like" inability to make a decision and abide by it.

He said he was not objecting to the editorial, but to what he called deliberate slanting of the news to justify the editorial.

"There is no room for editorializing in the news presentation of what happens at this board," Moore said.

Because the Herald is the only local daily newspaper on the Monterey Peninsula, the editors have "an inherent responsibility to deal with the facts as clearly as possible and not with opinions in the presentation of news," Moore said.

Asked about Moore's charge, Albert Cross, managing editor of the newspaper, said, "The only comment I have is that the story very clearly states he was voting on the consistency of the project with the master plan and quotes him to say he was inclined to vote against it if it ever came back to the board of supervisors. We stand by our story."

Meets at Brinton's

Garden club goal: The greening of black thumbs

By KEN PETERSON

SO YOU THOUGHT garden clubs were for women in print dresses who sit around once a week in someone's backyard sipping lemonade and comparing notes on roses?

Well, think again.

The Men's Garden Club of the Monterey Peninsula is 12 years old and thriving. With more than 30 members from the Peninsula, primarily Carmel and Carmel Valley, it offers advice and assistance for anyone from the advanced horticulturist to the rank amateur with a black thumb.

Dr. George Webster of Carmel Valley joined the club when he retired from his Bay Area medical practice three years ago. He now is the secretary and treasurer of the organization.

"The club largely consists of real amateurs," Webster said. "I'm surprised sometimes at how little we know."

He is quick to exempt some club members, men like Fred Bell who is a former president of the local Begonia Society.

But the common tie that binds the members together is an interest in gardening and the desire to learn more about it.

•

THE MEMBERS MEET once a month in the garden room at Brinton's Hardware Store at the mouth of Carmel Valley. They hear a talk on some aspect of gardening: a specific plant, propagation techniques, mulching and the like.

They also have workshop sessions at the homes of club members to learn gardening techniques through demonstrations and experience.

The club has a semi-annual plant sale. Money from the sale goes toward charitable projects, Webster said. The club's latest project was tilling and landscaping the grounds at the Blind and Visually Impaired Center in Pacific Grove. In cooperation with the Cypress Garden Club, it has created a touch and smell garden for the blind, complete with braille identification signs on the plants.

The Peninsula garden club also enters an exhibit each year at the Monterey County Fair. Webster said it generally takes one of the top theme prizes. Field trips and holiday parties also are regular club activities.

Gardening draws together a diverse group of people, Webster said. One of the club founders was an acrobat, while others, like himself, come from the professions.

"It's basically a retired men's club," he said, adding that club lectures draw "as many women as men."

The club activities let someone who has an idea they might like gardening get more involved, Webster said.

"About 50 per cent drop out in the first year," he said.

•

NOT SURPRISINGLY, most of the men first get interested in vegetable gardening rather than flowers, Webster said. Once they're hooked, the whole realm of the plant world opens up.

"This area is as blessed for ornamental horticulture as any place in the entire United States," he said. "In the Carmel Valley and Salinas, it gets warm. In Carmel, they have the foggy climate."

Webster himself has a variety of native plants growing on the hillside behind his home. But he also has branched out, building his own greenhouse for African violets. He calls it a hedge against the day he doesn't want to go out and dig in the garden any more.

Webster said the club gets a lot of support from nurseries on the Peninsula. They don't feel threatened by gardeners raising plants themselves, he said. In fact, he said, they believe the added interest in gardening increases sales of plants and nursery supplies.

The only time they are in head-to-head competition is during club plant sales. The club members' plants, propagated from cuttings, may not always look as healthy as nursery plants, but Webster believes they have another selling point.

"They were grown by someone like you. If they've survived, they can grow anywhere."

The Monterey County Foundation of Concern will host its fourth annual steak barbecue for members and invited guests at Rancho Canada Golf Club on Carmel Valley Road on Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Besides featuring an auction, the barbecue will feature singer Wendy Withrow.

Bill Barker of the Monterey County Farm Bureau will preside as chef.

Guests will include Senator and Mrs. Robert Nimmo, R-Atascadero, Carol Hallet, R-Atascadero, and members of the Monterey County Supervisors.

Vocational education to benefit

Carmel Unified School District receives $6,000 in state aid

Carmel Unified School District will receive $6,000 in state aid for its vocational education program, district trustees learned last week. It lost out on an additional $1,000 because the high school home economics teacher is on sabbatical leave this year.

According to Chuck Phillips, coordinator of vocational programs at Carmel High School, the money will buy some new books and equipment. The agriculture, auto shop, wood shop, industrial drafting and office skills classes all will benefit, he said.

The home economics program also would have received $1,000 for instructional materials except for what Superintendent Carl Wilsey termed an "unnecessary law." The district is not offering home economics this year because the teaching position is vacant. Thus, it does not meet state requirements for vocational education assistance. But the class is part of the district course of study and will be offered again next year.

New materials purchased for the program this year could have been used next fall when the class resumes.

Some garage sale items still available

Most unsold merchandise from the garage sale to benefit the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula has been given to the Monterey Peninsula Volunteers' thrift shop, but a few large items still are for sale at the Hospice, according to Dr. John Von Berg, the sale chairman.

Items include a potter's kiln with accessories, a new circular bar, a three- and two-seater settee sectional combination with tables, a small gas stove two electric stoves, an electric oven, a six-burner counter restaurant cooking unit, and a coin-operated ice cream dispenser.

These can be seen weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Phone for an appointment. The number is 625-0666.

He hopes for rookie driver honors

Valley dentist to race in Mexico

CARMEL VALLEY dentist Frank Joyce flew to Mexico City with his racing team Thursday hoping to lock up a driving title and Rookie of the Year honors at the Copa Mexico race.

Joyce has driven his Chevrolet Corvette to an overall third place standing in the Sports Car Club of America Trans-Am series this year.

He also stands in first by just a point for the manufacturer's division championship. He expects to win that title over the weekend.

During the racing season, Joyce set two track records in qualifying races and earned three third place finishes across the nation.

At the beginning of the year, he set out to make his mark in the racing world. Now, Joyce said, he has been told he has the inside track for pro Rookie of the Year recognition by the SCCA.

He almost didn't make it to Mexico City because his sponsorship money ran out at the end of the year. Joyce credits a last-minute rescue by Cypress Aviation of Salinas for his final opportunity to race.

The firm will fly his racing team to Mexico and also has donated cash to defray other expenses.

Joyce said the thin air of Mexico City will help him in his bid to win the races that start Friday. His 450cc engine is the largest in the race and "there's no replacement for displacement at high altitude."

In his last five races, Joyce finished third three times. He set track qualifying records at Laguna Seca and Elkhart Lake, Wis., in his final two outings but finished no better than eighth in the races because of mechanical failures.

Next year, he expects to get financial support from Chevrolet and other backers for Phantom Racing, his driving team.

"For the first year around, we've turned a lot of heads," he said.

Makes rural building costly

Prop. 13 may help control growth, planner says

By KEN PETERSON

PROPOSITION 13, the property tax limit amendment, will serve the growth management goal of discouraging urban development in open space and farmland, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors was told last week.

Because of limited tax revenues, the cost burden for building new roads and sewers and supplying fire and police protection will shift from local government to the developers who build new subdivisions, predicted Bruce Buel, an associate planner with the city of Seaside. He did not predict whether homebuyers, in turn, would be willing to pay the additional costs.

Buel addressed the supervisors at an information session before their regular Tuesday meeting. It was the second discussion of growth management sponsored by the American Institute of Architects and American Institute of Planners.

"Prop. 13 has severely limited the ability of the county to continue subsidizing development," Buel said. "To the extent you don't have the revenue (for service) and the developers build, you suffer fiscal impacts."

Buel said the taxes from a $60,000 home might have brought $1,500 per year to the county before Prop. 13—enough money countywide to offset the cost of services needed by new developments.

Now. the same house would bring in only $600 in taxes, he said.

"SUBSIDIES HAVE been given to the private sector for the last 20 years," Buel said. "By prohibiting development where there are no facilities, you put the burden on the private sector.

"Some facilities could be so expensive, development could not be expected to pay for it. It may well be that certain areas of the county are not economically feasible for development," Buel said, and "should not be considered for residential or industrial development."

The growth management policy approved by the supervisors Sept. 26 provides:

• That growth will be concentrated in existing cities or areas where there are urban services and discouraged elsewhere to preserve open space and farmland.

• That new growth areas will be approved only if they protect natural resources better than development in existing urban areas.

• That all development proposals will be given points depending upon how well they meet the requirements of the growth management policy. Those with the most points would be approved. Criteria include protection of farmland, clustering housing units and preserving visually sensitive slopes.

All these factors combine to encourage growth near urban centers where the services are already in place.

Since the adopted growth management plan encourages filling in existing vacant urban areas, it also will have consequences for cities and urban service districts.

"If you shift to infilling, the responsibility for services goes from the county to the cities," he said. "They will be asked to bear the burden of new development. The consequences are part and parcel of what the supervisors adopted when they adopted the growth management policy."

•

GOVERNMENT AGENCIES and developers who must pay for roads, sewers and other services will not be the only ones affected by growth management.

The policy decisions will affect the value of individual parcels of land, Buel said.

"You can expect that certain property owners are going to lose land value and that's not going to be popular," he said.

The problem is that Monterey County is now overzoned, Buel said. Current zoning regulations could produce a county population of up to 1 million people, he estimated. Transportation studies project only 420,000 people in the county by 1995, about double the current population.

"That allows growth to go almost anywhere in Monterey County," Buel said. "There are no mechanisms to control growth."

That also is changing as a result of Prop. 13, he said. It used to be the case that the county could obtain more tax dollars by upzoning property to permit greater density or intensive commercial use.

"Prop. 13 eliminated the relation of land value to land zoning," Buel said.

As a result, "local government now can start to be honest" about zoning land the way it believes it should be used, he said.

•

"ECONOMICS IN land use deals with setting expectations," Buel said. "It tells landowners how much of a development right a landowner has. For growth management to be implementable, that bundle of rights has to be honest. It must tell a landowner what he can accurately expect to do with his land in the future."

Working out specifics that will do this is "the guts of the growth management policy," Buel said.

It is a process that will involve looking at economic issues and deciding not only where the county can afford to grow but where it needs to grow.

Without translating those ideas into specifics in the General Plan and on county zoning maps, Buel said, "the growth management policy is just a shell. It will not affect the development of Monterey County."

County Planners schedule growth management talks

A growth management policy in Monterey County is expected to move from generalities to specifics next Wednesday in discussions scheduled before the Monterey County Planning Commission.

A commission subcommittee will report back in the afternoon on ways to put the recently adopted policy into the county general plan. Included in the report will be a budget for accomplishing the task, according to Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley.

Commissioners Joseph Sullivan, Peter Cailotto and Charmaine Cruchett served on the committee, with Planning Director Ed DeMars also participating in discussions.

According to Cailotto, the group met Tuesday and Wednesday night and will meet again today to draft its recommendations. He said the committee will have a program to recommend to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. But he declined to discuss it until the commission meeting next Wednesday.

The board adopted a growth management policy in September that would direct growth to existing urban areas where services are in place; encourage cluster development and discourage building in viewshed areas; and subject all development proposals to a point system which would screen out less desirable projects.

The commission discussion is planned at the end of its regular agenda for the day. The last scheduled item on the agenda is shortly before 4 p.m. The growth management discussion could take place after that hour.

Board of Supervisors to hear three Robles subdivision plans

Appeals of three subdivision plans in the Robles del Rio area will be heard at the same time before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, the board decided Tuesday.

At the urging of Supervisor Sam Farr of Carmel, the board tabled one appeal from Abraham Loefsky until two other proposals also come before the board.

The Loefsky minor subdivision would create three lots off Calle de los Agrinemsors at the southern end of the 1920s subdivision near Carmel Valley Village. It was denied by the Monterey County Planning Commission in August.

Two other proposals—the seven-lot Vista Robles major subdivision and the four-lot Steele-Cooper minor subdivision—were rejected by planning bodies last week.

Both are on Calle de los Agrinemsors, within a few thousand yards of each other, and of the Loefsky property.

All three have generated strong public opposition in recent weeks. They are the target of the "Robles Revolt," a homeowners' group opposed to new lot splits in Robles del Rio. The group's leaders have scheduled their next meeting for Wednesday, at 8 p.m. in the Tularcitos School multi-purpose room.

Opponents claim the water, road and fire protection systems serving the area already are strained and cannot support much additional growth. They want new developments restricted to existing lots of record.

Advisory group to meet Monday

A meeting to explain the function of the Upper Carmel Valley Advisory Committee, which offers opinions about county planning issues, has been scheduled for Monday at Tularcitos School. The campus is at 35 Ford Road.

All seven committee members resigned in October. They claimed the Monterey County Planning Commission often ignored their advice and supplied incomplete information about proposed developments they studied.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. Speakers will be William Peters and Gary Varga, planning commissioners who represent the fifth supervisorial district, and Robert Slimmon, the county zoning administrator.

Peters said he and Varga plan to submit the names of the nominees when the planning commission meets Nov. 8. The nominees are subject to confirmation by the commission.

Persons who apply must live east of Miramonte Road and Garland Regional Park and in points west from Los Tulares subdivision. The north-south boundaries are the crest of Laureles Grade and the southern rim of the Valley.

The speakers will explain the advisory role of the committee and the type of decisions it influences, Peters said. Members are not paid, he said.

Rancho del Sol due for review at end of Nov.

A 20-lot subdivision on the open hills across from Garland Park in Carmel Valley comes up for review before the Monterey County Planning Commission at the end of the month.

Some environmental conditions are proposed to mitigate effects of the Rancho del Sol development, but the basic subdivision proposal was left unchanged by the county Minor Subdivision Committee after its review Oct. 26.

The development is planned on a 125.5-acre parcel on the north slope of Carmel Valley, just across Carmel Valley Road from Garland Regional Park. It also is visible from Laureles Grade Road.

The 20 lots would range in size from 1.3 acres up, with the average lot size 2.4 acres. The project would leave 67.3 acres in open space, with 48.2 acres developed.

Mitigations proposed on the project include soil borings and other tests to see if the ground is suitable for septic tanks. Unacceptable lots would have to be combined with other parcels and eliminated as building sites. Developers also must provide a riding and hiking trail.

The major environmental effect of the project would be on the viewshed, according to the environmental impact report for Rancho del Sol. The EIR suggested that the subdivision might be changed to large-acreage estates rather than a 20-lot development.

The planning commission will review the preliminary subdivision map for the project on Nov. 29 when it meets in Salinas.

Two years ago, Henry Mello promised to work hard for property tax reform and a no-frills state budget. He also pledged to keep in touch with the people of the district and represent all his constituents fairly, Democrats, Republicans and Independents.

After his first term in office, the record shows Henry Mello kept his word.

PROPERTY TAX REFORM As freshman Vice-Chairman of the Revenue and Taxation Committee, he fought to cut government spending and end unfair property tax laws.

CRIME Mello helped pass laws to end early release of dangerous criminals and sponsored tougher protection statutes for the elderly, blind and handicapped.

ENERGY He led the effort to avert predicted energy shortages and became the spokesman for exploration of alternate energy sources. He authored a bill to make California an effective "wind energy" state as an alternative, auxiliary energy source.

INFLATION He urged a halt to wasteful and unnecessary programs through strict controls on state and local government spending.

PERSONAL CONTACT Mello met with over 200 Santa Cruz and Monterey County organizations, and thousands of individuals during the last year and a half.

ENVIRONMENT Mello introduced Assembly Bill No. AJR-96 which places the State Legislature in strong opposition to offshore oil well drilling in Northern California waters.

WATER He carried legislation giving local residents the final say in their water resources management.

CHILDREN -- And he kept state child care programs alive when loss of federal funds threatened to close them.

Color photos on exhibit in Carmel

An exhibit entitled New Ideas in Color Photography will open with a reception Friday, Nov. 3, 8-10 p.m., at the Friends of Photography Gallery in Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Photographers whose works are included in the exhibition are John Divola of Venice, Calif. Steve Fitch of Albuquerque, N.M.; Kenda North of Breckenridge, Colo.; Arthur Ollman of San Francisco; and John Pfahl of Buffalo, N.Y.

The exhibit reflects the growing interest among photographers in the use of color itself as a creative tool. The five photographers, who have all received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts, include color in their photographs in varying ways.

The Friends of Photography has included color photographs in many previous exhibitions, but this is the first devoted solely to color.

Freshman class tested

School trustees review spring proficiency testing scores

By KEN PETERSON

THE CARMEL SCHOOL district proficiency tests may need a few bugs removed before students are denied diplomas if they can't pass the tests.

That was the consensus of school district trustees last week when they reviewed spring test scores from the freshman class, the first that will have to pass the tests to graduate.

Minimum competency required after 1981

District teachers and administrators drew up the examinations themselves last fall without relying on professional testing agencies for guidance.

Of the freshmen students tested last spring, 135 of 244 (55 per cent) passed the mathematics examination, 49 (20 per cent) scored high enough—a "benchmark" score— not to need remedial help, and 60 (25 per cent) failed.

In reading, 230 of 255 (90 per cent) passed general reading criteria, 15 (6 per cent) are making adequate progress, and 10 (4 per cent) failed. In the reading section dealing with library use, 197 of 251 (79 per cent) passed, 36 (14 per cent) are making adequate progress and 18 (7 per cent) failed.

In the six sections of the writing test, 256 students were tested. Anywhere from 74 per cent to 98 per cent passed each of the sections, with 0 to 33 per cent failing individual sections.

High school principal Dan Stevenson said students who achieved a benchmark score on the tests should be able to pass them before graduation without remedial help.

Students who scored over 70 per cent on the tests and passed last spring will not have to take the proficiency tests again. Students who scored below the 60 per cent benchmark figure already have had letters sent to their parents detailing the situation and suggesting remedial classes this fall.

When the tests are first required by state law next spring, students who fail will be called in for mandatory conferences with parents and a counselor. The aim is to work with the students and get a program of classes so they will achieve the minimum proficiencies by the time they graduate.

•

TRUSTEE FRANCES Gaver wondered, in reviewing the results, "how much is it a test of the tests and how much is it a test of the students?"

"We've chosen to define our own competencies and write our own tests," she said. "We can have a test that is less than perfectly reliable.

"I don't know if the test results say a significant number of our students are in trouble with math or if our test doesn't measure the abilities of our students," she said.

Superintendent Carl Wilsey said he will try to get a professional testing service to evaluate the Carmel examinations.

While the tests were administered last spring, and will be given to the class of 1981 again next spring, the current crop of sophomores will not be directly affected by the competency exams until 1981.

Under state law, all high school seniors in California must achieve minimum competencies in math, reading and writing in order to receive a diploma after June 1981.

Individual school districts are empowered to draw up their own competency standards.

Mrs. Gaver said she would be worried if Carmel students are denied diplomas if they know enough to pass the competency test used by some other school district.

Mathematics department chairman John Durein said the trustees agreed last year to set their own standards without referring to what other districts are doing.

Trustee Elizabeth Bell wondered if the examinations are tough enough.

"Are we doing minimum competencies in college prep subjects?" she asked. "A lot of districts are going beyond this."

"We should set two or three levels of objectives," replied Stevenson. "We shouldn't deny a kid a diploma because he can't pass the entrance exams for the University of California."

"My concern is the minimums may become all important," said Mrs. Bell. "The students may feel once they pass this, that's it."

"I don't perceive Carmel students doing that," Stevenson responded.

Enrollment is up; some class overloads found in Carmel schools

AVERAGE CLASS SIZE in Carmel schools is close to the 25-to-1 ratio required under teacher contracts. But high enrollment in some classrooms has the district board of trustees worried.

"You talk about averages," said Trustee Elizabeth Bell at last week's board meeting. "The students in a class of 30 don't care about the average."

Principal Dan Stevenson of Carmel High School, where most of the large enrollments were noted, said those teachers with 30 or more pupils are handling their classes effectively and have refused additional help. At the elementary school level, two principals said paid and volunteer aides take pressure off the teachers and give children individual attention.

Ray Stumbo, with four high school social studies classes of more than 30 pupils, "could effectively teach 300 students a day," Stevenson said. "To say he could teach only 120 (in those classes) would be a crime."

He added that "I have literally begged teachers to take more help. Nobody wants more. People are pretty much content with their lot."

Stevenson pointed out that enrollment at the high school is 1,156, above the 1,119 projected for this year. Two staff positions cut in anticipation of declining enrollment were restored recently to reduce classroom sizes.

Even with the surprise fluctuation in enrollment and uncertainty about staffing because the budget was delayed by Proposition 13, the high school has only 57 classes of 30 pupils or more, down from 80 "a couple of years ago," Stevenson said.

•

BUT MRS. BELL insisted that large classes allow less time for teachers to give individual attention to pupil compositions and test results.

"I feel our youngsters are not getting their money's worth," she said. "For example, are we turning out one composition a week in English?"

Stevenson said no, but "our students are doing a lot of writing."

"I'd like an essay a week," Mrs. Bell said.

Bob Aronson, the student representative to the board, said he believes the quality of writing would suffer if a composition a week were required. He said he gets an essay assignment every third week in his English class.

"It's not the amount of essays," Aronson said. "It's what we put in them."

Mrs. Bell said she also is concerned about the size enrollments in elementary school classes. District figures reviewed last week show class enrollments of 33 pupils in the combined first-second grade class at Carmelo; 28 in the third grade; and 30 in the fourth grade; 28 in River School kindergarten; 30 and 29 in two first grade classes; and 31 and 29 in second grade rooms; 29 and 28 in the Tularcitos first grade rooms; 31 in second grade; 30 in a combined second-third grade class; 28 in third grade; and 29 in the fourth-fifth grade class; and 32 in both the third and fifth grade classes at Woods School.

Principal Vance Frazier of River School and Principal Sharron Miller of Woods both said paid aides and parent volunteer assistance reduce the impact of large class sizes.

•

AVERAGE CLASS size at Carmel Middle School is about 25 pupils, with higher enrollments in some social studies and foreign language classes.

Trustee Frances Gaver said classes with more than 30 pupils are "a red flag" to the district to keep a careful eye on enrollment.

"I get this message from you and I listen and I behave," Stevenson said. "Those who are teaching the kids say, 'It's okay, we're doing the job.'

"You don't have to tell me to listen to Carmel High School teachers complain. I get it even louder and clearer than from you."

The board asked Stevenson to report back in the winter on projected classroom enrollments for the second semester.

Volunteer firemen obtain paging radios

Dear Editor:

The Valley volunteers would like to express their sincere appreciation of the fine article you did concerning our drive to obtain new paging radios for the Carmel Valley Fire Department. Because of your article, we have already had five of the sixteen radios we are seeking donated to us by Roger Williams of Carmel Valley.

Your coverage of the various fire department functions and especially your cooperation with Fire Prevention Week are an invaluable aid to all the local fire departments. Thank you again.

Talbotts honored by RLS

ROBERT AND AUDREY Talbott, founders of Talbott Ties, were honored Friday at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach. The Carmel couple had the academic center on campus dedicated in their name. Their son, Robert Jr., graduated from Stevenson in 1966. Last year, the Talbotts gave the school deed on their home in Bear Valley. It was valued at $250,000. Friday's ceremony reunited the Talbotts with their many friends at the school. At the left, Audrey embraces the Rev. Clifford "Coach" Wilson, the campus chaplain, as Robert looks on. After the ceremony, a party for the Talbotts was hosted on the Academic Quadrangle Lawn, where they met more of the friends they remembered from son Robert's days at school. (Michael Stang photos)

Carmel High girls undefeated

Swim championships Saturday

The Carmel High School girls' swim team, undefeated in its last 62 dual meets, will host the Mission Trail Athletic League swim championships Saturday beginning at 12:30 p.m.

The squad defeated both Monterey Bay League champion Salinas and league rival Pacific Grove last week before heading to the championship meet.

All swimming events and the diving championships are planned at the Carmel High School pool. The diving preliminaries will take place at the pool today at 1:30 p.m.

Carmel is the defending MTAL champion. Swimmers who place in the championship meet will advance to the Central Coast Section championships Nov. 1 and 18.

No first-aid class for lack of a dummy

Carmel High School students and administrators want to start a program in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training on campus. All that stands in the way is money.

Senior Dave Lathrop approached the Carmel district board of trustees last week to ask if it could provide CPR training for students.

Lathrop cited a 1977 state law which requires districts to offer CPR training "when appropriate equipment is available." CPR is a technique for restarting the heartbeat and breathing of an accident or heart attack victim.

High school principal Dan Stevenson said the district has not begun a CPR class because of the $1,000 cost of a training dummy.

Stevenson said in an interview he will propose adding CPR training to the high school curriculum.

"Then we'll have to start looking around for resources" to buy a dummy, he said.

Basic first aid and accident prevention is taught in a driver's education-health section offered at the high school. Students also can be certified in first-aid methods by taking a health class elective.

Stevenson called the certification "a plus" which goes beyond state requirements.

He told trustees he wants to add CPR training when it is financially possible. Stevenson also said he believes "mandatory first-aid training for all staff is a good idea."

School secretaries have, in the past, been encouraged to take first-aid training.

Trustee Frances Gaver said this is wise, particularly since the district has cut back on school nurses.

Carmel schools approve plan to rent space

The Carmel school district board of trustees approved a user fee schedule last Tuesday, for school facilities ranging up to $30 per hour for the high school football field.

Classrooms and other facilities will still be free to public agencies, senior citizens' organizations and cultural organizations. Recreational, school and youth organizations are also entitled to use the facilities on either a free or actual cost basis.

Under the policy adopted unanimously, the district will review requests to use school facilities and approve them either on a free use, cost use fee or commercial use fee basis, depending upon the group and the activity.

A sample of commercial rates include $10 per hour for the gymnasium, $7 per hour for a library, $5 per hour for classrooms or tennis courts, $12 per hour for the swimming pool, and $20 per hour for athletic fields other than the high school football stadium.

Cost use rates are generally half that, with the users charged for any additional custodial work required.

Commercial rates will generally apply to anyone charging admission for a private activity using school facilities. There are exceptions, with details available from district officials at 624-1546.

The rates were authorized by school trustees last summer because passage of Proposition 13 made it difficult for the district to absorb custodial and utility costs associated with unrestricted free public use of school facilities.

SENIOR Carol Bialek, 17, will represent Carmel High School in the Daughters of the American Revolution national scholarship contest. Selected both by students and faculty members, she can advance through state and national competition to win a $1,000 scholarship. The award is based on dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. Carol is the daughter of Huton and Shirley Bialek. She also is the student body president.

outlook on THEATRE/EVENTS

THE BELLA LEWITZKY Dance Company will perform Wednesday, Nov. 8, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

Sondheim music in Wharf's revue

Side by Side by Sondheim, a revue of songs from several musicals, is the current offering at the Wharf Theatre on Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey.

Side by Side is presented at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings and 8 p.m. Sundays.

Stephen Sondheim wrote all the lyrics in the show; music is by Sondheim and such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Mary Rodgers, Richard Rodgers and Jule Styne. The songs range from the lyrical Send in the Clowns, from A Little Night Music, to the ironic Little Things, from Company and The Boy From, from The Mad Show.

A cast of three Peninsula performers—Katharine Collins, Danny Gochnauer and Barbara Morgan—sing the songs, which also include If Momma Was Married, from Gypsy; Broadway Baby, from Follies; You Must Meet My Wife, from A Little Night Music; and Pretty Lady from Pacific Overtures.

Janice O'Brien is narrator and Barney Hulse is accompanist.

For reservations or more information, phone 372-7367.

'Barnyard Follies' opens in Valley

The Barnyard Follies, a variety show of music, comedy and dance, will be presented Friday-Saturday, Nov. 3-5, at the Carmel Barnyard Theatre, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel.

Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Bruce Tuthill is director of the production.

For reservations or more information, phone 625-1228 after 10 a.m. Tuesday-Saturday.

'Wait Until Dark' at Carmel High

Wait Until Dark, a suspenseful play about a game of wits between a blind woman and a group of heroin smugglers, will be presented this weekend by the Pawnshop Players at Carmel High School, Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue, Carmel.

The play will be staged Friday and Saturday, Nov. 4-5, at 8 p.m. Performances are also scheduled Thursday-Saturday, Nov. 9-11.

Audrey Hepburn and Alan Arkin starred in the screen version of the Frederick Knott play. High school dramatists in the cast are Steven Moorer, Carol Bialek, Bob Aronson, Rhet Topham, Alana Bernardi, Andy Fitton, Jaime Awamleh and D. J. Dirk.

The play is not recommended for children.

Tickets, at $2 for adults and $1 for students, will be available at the door.

For reservations or more information, phone 624-1821 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

JORGE MOREL, called "the complete guitarist" by Chet Atkins, will present a concert of classic guitar music Sunday, Nov. 5 at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concert is the final event in the third Carmel Classic Guitar Festival.

Holiday bazaar Sat.

The United Methodist Women of the First United Methodist Church of Pacific Grove will present their annual holiday bazaar Saturday, Nov. 4, in Grantham Hall, 17-Mile Drive and Sunset Drive, Pacific Grove. Hours are 10 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

All sorts of homemade Christmas gifts will be sold and a luncheon will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. A snack bar will be open all day.

Classic Guitar Festival opens Friday at Sunset

An exceptional array of performing artists and more than 20 individual attractions will fill the three days of the third Carmel Classic Guitar Festival Friday-Sunday, Nov. 3-5, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel.

The festival will honor composer/guitarist Miguel Llobet (1878-1938) with lectures by Ronald Purcell Friday at 1:30 p.m. and by Jose Rey de la Torre Saturday at the same time. Music by Llobet will be played by many of the artists in concert.

A guitar competition will begin Friday at 9 a.m. and continue Saturday morning. Finals and the announcement of winners of the $1,750 in prizes donated by Monterey Savings and Loan Association will be Sunday morning.

A Luthier Exhibition will open Friday at 9 a.m. and remain open throughout the three days of the Festival. (Luthiers are makers of lutes, guitars and other stringed instruments.)

Solo concerts will be presented Friday by David Tanenbaum at 4 p.m. and Manuel Barrueco at 8 p.m. Jeff Linsky will present a concert of jazz on the classic guitar Saturday at 4:30 p.m. Saturday evening's concert will be in two parts: The Guitar in Chamber Music will be presented by guitarist George Sakellariou, soprano Carolyn Caton, flutist Raymond Fabrizio and violinist David Schneider; Sakellariou will play solo guitar in the second part.

Pena Latinoamericana will present guitar ensemble music of Latin America Sunday at 1:30 p.m. Ensemble members are Richard Stover on classic guitar, cuatro and charango; Roger Emanuels on cello; Jesse Pessoa on Paraguayan folk harp; vocalist Rebecca Stover; and Ron Freshman on guitar.

Alice Artzt will present a solo concert at 3:30 p.m. and Jorge Morel will close the Festival with a concert at 8 p.m. Sunday.

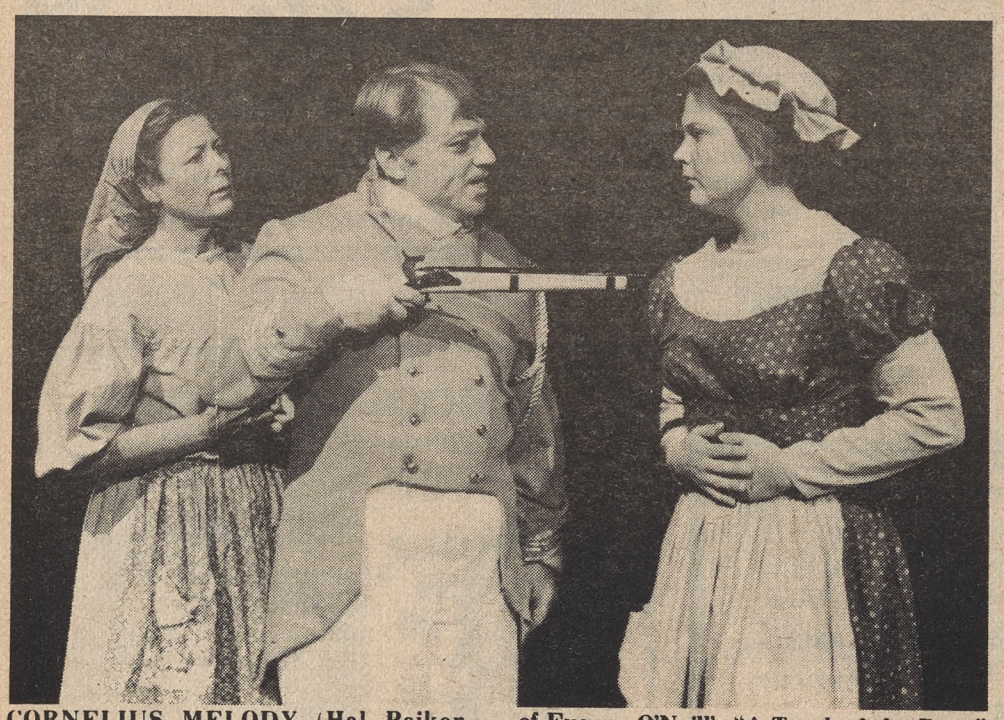
Also scheduled is a Composer's Showcase Friday morning, 9 a.m.-noon, to provide public auditions for composers of new and original solo works for the classic guitar; a slide presentation on guitar construction Friday at 1 p.m.; and a lecture and demonstration entitled The Lute to be presented by William Bryant Saturday at 9:30 a.m. Antique instruments, some made by such legendary luthiers as de Torres, Simplicio, Esteso, Santos Hernandez and Hauser, will be on display throughout the three-day festival.

The festival was organized in 1974 by guitarists and educators to promote and develop the classic guitar as an important means of artistic expression. It was designed to create professional outlets for both recognized concert artists and unknown gifted young performers and to provide an annual meeting ground for guitarists, composers, luthiers, music scholars, students and interested listeners.

Guy Horn is president of the Festival Board of Trustees and Andres Segovia is an honorary board member.

Advance tickets, at $35 for the entire festival or $6 for each evening concert, are available at Carmel Music, Dolores and Fifth, Carmel; the Monterey Box Office at Sun Stereo, Del Monte Shopping Center, Monterey; Lily-Walker Records and Music, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; and Bartlett's Music, Dolores and Fifth, Carmel. Tickets are $3.50 for all morning events, $5 for Friday and Saturday afternoon events and $6 for Sunday afternoon concerts.

For more information, phone 625-2189 or 625-1827.



CORNELIUS MELODY (Hal Peiken, center) confronts his sharp-tongued daughter (Tammie Lewis, right) while his wife (Rosamund Goodrich) looks on in a scene from the Hartnell College production of Eugene O'Neill's "A Touch of the Poet." The play will be staged Thursday-Saturday evenings at the Hartnell College Performing Arts Theatre, 146 Homestead Ave., Salinas.

At York School

Staff Players present 'Skin of Our Teeth'

Thornton Wilder's The Skin of Our Teeth will be presented during November by the Staff Players of the Children's Experimental Theatre at the Bishop Library of York School, 9501 Monterey-Salinas Highway, Monterey.

The show opens Friday, Nov. 3, and plays Friday-Sunday evenings except Nov. 10 throughout the month. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings and 7:30 p.m. Sundays.

Henry Littlefield and Marcia Hovick star in the Pulitzer Prize winning story of the extraordinary adventures of the Antrobus family down through the ages, from the time the great wall of ice creeps over the world to the end of the war—any war. The family survives flood, fire, pestilence, the seven-year locusts, the ice age, the black pox and the double feature, a dozen wars and as many depressions. "Wonderfully wise as well as wacky," said the New York Herald Tribune. "A vital and wonderful piece of theater. . .. a tremendously exciting and profound stage fable."

The Antrobus children are played by Dwight Marshall and Christine Henrard; Julia Shumelda is Sabina; Louis Wilson is the fortune teller; and Jerry Matt is the announcer. Nick Hovick is the director.

'A Touch of the Poet' at Hartnell College

A Touch of the Poet, one of playwright Eugene O'Neill's more romantic dramas, will be presented at the Hartnell College Performing Arts Theatre, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas.

Opening performances are scheduled Thursday-Saturday, Nov. 2-4 at 8 p.m. The play will also be staged Nov. 10-12 and Nov. 16-18.

Poet tells the story of a man, once a major in the Duke of Wellington's army, who is reduced to an innkeeper near Boston in the early 19th century. Drink and grandiose memories keep him from his dismal reality, which includes a subservient wife and sharp-tongued daughter.

The play, an objective and romantic treatment of the theme of heroes falling from high places, bridges the gap between traditional theater and the stark drama characteristic of O'Neill.

Ronald Danko directs the play; Harold Peiken plays Cornelius Melody; Rosamund Goodrich is his wife; and Tammie Lewis is his irksome daughter.

Sierra Club hike Sunday

• A seven-mile hike of moderate difficulty through Jacks Peak Park is on the outing calendar of the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club Sunday, Nov. 5.

Hikers should bring lunch, beverage and a 50-cent carpool fee and meet in the parking lot of the Del Monte Shopping Center in Monterey at 8:30 a.m.

Ladies polo in Valley this weekend

The Carmel Valley Riding Center will be the site of the first games in the F. B. Hart Ladies' Polo Tournament this weekend. Polo players from UC Davis are hosts of the affair.

The Davis players will be matched against all-woman teams from Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo and Carmel Valley.

Play begins at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 4, and 11 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 5. Spectators are welcome. There is no charge for admission and guests are invited to bring tailgate picnics and enjoy an afternoon of sun and sport.

Subsequent matches in the tournament are scheduled for Dec. 4-5 and Jan. 6-7, 1979.

The Carmel Valley Riding Center is off Robinson Canyon Road. For directions or additional information, phone 624-4530.

Lewitzky dancers in concert at Sunset Center Wednesday

The Bella Lewitzky Dance Company, "a dance force that MUST be experienced," will present a concert Wednesday, Nov. 8, at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

Bella Lewitzky is unique among America's leading modern dance artists for having remained always a California resident. Described by Los Angeles Times critic Martin Bernheimer as a "marvelously inventive choreographer," Miss Lewitzky has evolved an individualistic and innovative choreographic style which reflects her delight in the open spaciousness of the West and her acute awareness of human contradictions.

Walter Terry of Saturday Review says, "I strongly recommend that you...see Bella Lewitzky's West Coast company. This superb dancer-choreographer, one of the two great pioneers (the other is the late Lester Horton) of modern dance west of the Mississippi, is ever in the avant-garde, and it's an enormously theatrical avant-garde. You may not understand everything Bella is saying in her brilliantly architectural and sculptural movement designs, but you'll love it anyway."

Miss Lewitzky is one of 10 choreographers to receive an artistic director's discretionary fund grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

Reserved seat tickets, at $5.75 and $6.75, are available at the director's office at Sunset Center.

For reservations or more information, phone 624-3996.

CAROL BIALEK (right) is Suzy, the blind girl tormented by a gang of heroin smugglers in "Wait Until Dark," to be presented by the Pawnshop Players Friday and Saturday, Nov. 3-4, at Carmel High School. Alana Bernardi plays Gloria.

GEORGE ANTROBUS (Henry Littlefield) beams after being elected president of the Order of Mammals in a scene from "The Skin of Our Teeth," to be staged Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings by the Staff Players at York School. Sabina (Julia Shumelda) asks for his advice and sympathy.

Steele-Cooper subdivision in Robles rejected

A four-lot minor subdivision in Robles del Rio was rejected last Thursday by Monterey County planning officials because of environmental problems.

The Steele-Cooper proposal would have created parcels of 1, 4.8, 8 and 9 acres on Calle de los Agrinemsors.

But the county Minor Subdivision Committee voted to reject the subdivision on grounds that there are fire protection problems, inadequate water, inadequate road access, and because the property is not suitable for development, according to Wes Arvig of the planning department staff.

This marks the second time in two years a four-lot subdivision has been turned down on the property. The planning commission rejected a similar proposal by the previous owners in 1977.

The decision can be appealed by Chandler Steele and Jeanne Cooper to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Fire protection problems, inadequate road access, not suitable for development

Steele-Cooper is one of three subdivisions that are the focus of opposition by local property owners in the "Robles Revolt."

The Abraham Loefsky minor subdivision, a three-lot split adjacent to the Steele-Cooper land, has been rejected by the minor subdivision committee and is on appeal to the board of supervisors.

The Vista Robles major subdivision, a seven-lot split on 22 acres near the other proposals, was rejected last week by the planning commission on a 3-3-1 tie vote. It will also be appealed to the supervisors.

The homeowners' group contends no new land divisions should be approved in Robles del Rio until there is a second access road to the crowded subdivision. It is served by only a single road across the narrow Esquiline Bridge.

The area was subdivided in the late 1920s and now contains more than 400 homes and 1,000 people. County standards now require at least two access roads for developments of more than 200 homes.

Beginning Greek dancing course

Zorba's Dance, a six-week beginners' course in Greek dancing, will begin Friday, Nov. 10, at 7 p.m. at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. A $15 fee will be charged.

Instructor Michael Armstrong, who has studied ethnic dance for eight years, says participants also will learn about Greek culture through films, live music and ethnic foods. A trip to a Greek taverna (dance restaurant) is planned.

To register or for more information, phone Sunset Center, 624-3996.

Winner of scholarship

MIKE ROSS, 17, a senior at Carmel High School, has won the Century III Leaders Scholarship competition at the school. He will compete against other high school seniors from California for four state scholarships and could win a $10,000 scholarship in national competition. The program, funded by Shell Oil Co., emphasizes leadership abilities, community involvement and scores on a current events examination. Ross is the son of Edgar M. Ross of Carmel. Runners-up in the competition at Carmel High School were Chris Fromm and Joe Brock.

Chamber Chatter

By JEANELLE KAMINSKE
Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce

One of the greatest benefits of membership in the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce is getting your business name, location and telephone number in our large directory card, which is designed to fit into the front of your telephone book for quick reference.

The businesses or services are listed according to category, and the print is large and bold on heavyweight paper. The directories are distributed free through chamber members throughout the Valley, and are real time-savers in busy households, shops and offices.

Pick one up at Monterey Savings and Loan Association at the Mid-Valley Shopping Center, at Northern California Savings and Loan Association on Carmel Rancho Boulevard or at the chamber office in the Oak Building in the Village.

The new directory is going to press next week and you still have time to get your business name and phone number listed by joining us. New members are given a special membership rate right now, only $15 for the rest of our fiscal year (April 1, 1979). There are other advantages to joining: free copies of our color brochure; involvement in our community service projects; beautification programs; advertising in Western and Canadian media; our annual "Silent Auction"; and we have some great fun together at barbecues, parties and luncheons.

One local newspaper writer referred to Carmel Valley not as a place, but as a state of mind. Join us and meet some of the people who are working together to preserve this uniqueness and enrich community life.

Phone any of the following persons to get listed in the directory by the Nov. 10 deadline: John Tobias, Village Liquors, 659-4414; Ron Hunter, Monterey Savings and Loan, 625-1313; Jeanelle Kaminske, 625-1221.

Steelhead talk

• Former 49'er football player Ed Henke will be the guest speaker at the fourth annual Steelhead Seminar Sunday, Nov. 5, at the Monterey Youth Center, 777 Pearl St., Monterey. The free program begins at noon.

Preliminary C.V. Ranch map discussion tabled indefinitely

Review of the preliminary subdivision map for Carmel Valley Ranch was tabled indefinitely last Thursday by the Monterey County Minor Subdivision Committee.

According to Wes Arvig of the planning department staff, county departments still do not have the information needed to place conditions on the first phase of residential construction.

Landmark Land Co. of Oklahoma is asking permission to build 140 condominiums and 20 single-family homes in the two-year first phase of the development.

The Specific Plan for the ranch at Carmel Valley and Robinson Canyon roads permits a maximum of 500 homes and a 100-unit golf lodge, in addition to an 18-hole golf course and a 12-court tennis club.

Before the first 160 residential units can be approved, the developers must show they have a water supply; must come to a financing agreement to improve the Carmel Valley Road-Robinson Canyon Road intersection; and must come up with a satisfactory sewage treatment system for the project.

All of these steps are still in the discussion or review stage. Carmel Valley Ranch is negotiating with the California-American Water Co. for water and with the county public works department on a road agreement.

Their proposed sewage plant is under scrutiny by the state Department of Health.

Arvig was uncertain when the preliminary map for the development will be reviewed again.

After the staff members on the minor subdivision committee study the matter, it still must go to the Monterey County Planning Commission and the board of supervisors for final approval.

Girl's father sues

The father of a 27-year-old Carmel Valley woman, in a coma since her car struck a horse in September, has filed a claim for damages with Monterey County.

Paul Eberle of Woodland Hills says in his claim that the county is at fault in the accident because it failed to enforce laws controlling horses along public roads.

His daughter, Leanne Eberle, was the passenger in a car which struck a horse on Carmel Valley Road on Sept. 2. The horse was tossed into the air and through the windshield on top of her.

The claim filed last month with the Monterey County Board of Supervisors asks unspecified damages for injuries, medical expenses and lost wages. It is under review by the county counsel's office. Such claims are routinely rejected and referred to the county's insurance carrier for settlement or possible court action.

Congressman Panetta is accepting service academy applications

Representative Leon E. Panetta, D-Monterey, said this week that he is accepting applications for admission to the service academies. Men and women interested in competing for a nomination may obtain an application at Panetta's Monterey office, 380 Alvarado St., or by calling 649-3555.

Admission to the military academies is gained through a process of nomination and selection. Candidates may apply to their congressman, their two senators and the vice president, who may nominate from each of the 50 states. Each senator and congressman may submit 10 names in nomination for each academy vacancy and may have up to five cadets of midshipmen in attendance at West Point, Annapolis or the U.S. Air Force Academy at any one time.

Panetta will be filling vacancies at the Air Force Academy, the Naval Academy, West Point and the Merchant Marine Academy. Applicants must be at least 17 and not have passed their 22nd birthday as of July 1, 1979.

Obituaries

Herbert Farkas

Herbert Leon Farkas died Sunday at Community Hospital after a brief illness. A four-year resident of Del Mesa Carmel, he was 78.

Farkas was born in Atlantic City, N.J. He was the founder and president of the Herbert L. Farkas Co. of Newark, N.J. He was involved in the office and school furniture business from 1918 to 1973 when he retired and moved to Del Mesa Carmel.

He is survived by his widow, Bess Schwabacher of Carmel Valley; two daughters, Helen Staiabo of Carmel and Margary Rossi of Walton, Conn.; a son, Robert Farkas of Beverly Hills; a sister, Mildred Weinsaft of Ventnor, N.J., and six grandchildren.

The family suggests the memorial contributions be made to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, Box 7236, Carmel, or the American Cancer Society.
